bh management regional manager: Fragmenting Work Mick Marchington, 2005 This major new book examines the way in which employment is managed across organizational boundaries. It analyses how public-private partnerships, franchises, agencies and other forms of inter-firm contractual relations impact on work and employment and the experiences of those working in these increasingly significant forms of organization. It draws upon research undertaken in eight separate networks comprising over 50 organizations to explore the fragmentating effects of contemporary changes in the organization of work and employment relationships. It considers the consequences of increased reliance upon inter-organizational mechanisms for producing goods and especially for delivering services. It argues that established analyses continue to rely too heavily upon a model of the single employing organization whereas today the situation is often more complex and confused. Public-private 'partnerships' are one high profile example of this phenomenon but private enterprises are also developing new relations with their clients and customers that impinge upon the nature of the employment relationship. Established hierarchical forms are becoming disordered, with consequences for career patterns, training and skills, pay structures, disciplinary practice, worker voice, and the gendered division of labor. The findings of the study raise questions about the governance of such complex organizational forms, the appropriateness of current institutions for addressing this complexity, and the challenge of harnessing of employee commitment in circumstances where human resource practices are shaped by organizations other than the legal employer. Using an analytical schema of three dimensions (institutional, organizational, employment) and four themes (power, risk, identity, trust), the authors adopt an inter-disciplinary perspective to address these complex and critically important practical, policy and theoretical concerns. Fragmenting Work will be vital reading for all those wishing to understand the contemporary realities of work and employment.

bh management regional manager: Making of a Banker : Learning on Way Dr. K. Srinivasa Rao, 2022-06-25 About the Book: The book interestingly captures the four decades of experience of a humble banker who could rise to the level of General Manager in the bank. The triumphs and tribulations of a banker moving from one place to another, one responsibility to another, one geography to another meeting and working with team mates from different cultures, background and languages. Mingling with cross section of customers from different parts of the country and executing challenging tasks on way makes an interesting reading. The leadership lessons, operational experiences, success and failures and learning from peers provides an insight for potential leaders to take cue. Each line of responsibility and place of posting has been deftly segregated into a chapter so that the readers can pick to learn the nuances of working in similar positions. The contents can provide learning points to every curious learner. About the Author: Dr. Rao is a senior banker with 40 years of industry experience. He held diversified responsibilities in the bank in India/abroad learning from operational banking to policy making. His rich exposure provided him an in-depth understanding of banking. Due to his diversified interests, he joined teaching profession after completing banking career. He is keen to write, teach, publish and share his perspectives with next generation leaders – the students. His two books already published on banking has been the core part of his academic work.
